HAUPTMANN IN SUICIDE MOVE

Loss of Land Ownership Is Indictment of Tariff Policy

So Say Economic Experts at July Nashville Conference, Rev. James Workman Tells Rotarians of 9 Cities Gathered Here

"Massachusetts has half as many school children but twice the amount of school money as all ten Southern states combined. What is the economic explanation?" the Rev. James Workman, Methodist pastor, of Conway, asked 130 Rotarians gathered in Hotel Barlow Thursday night from nine southwest Arkansas cities.

Primary Burden of Relief Up to Home City, F.D.R. Warns

NRA'S NEW BOARDS

Two Groups Totalling 11
Men Entrusted With Organization

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Confidence that a unified attack "for a little while longer" would master "Old Man Depression" was expressed Friday by President Roosevelt in addressing the 1934 conference on mobilization for human needs.

To the assembled leaders of the group at the White House the president emphasized that it is up to the local communities to carry the primary relief burden.

He called it the privilege rather than the duty of the individual American to bear a share of relief costs.

The president said there had been some indifference in the emergency efforts to alleviate distress, but he looked forward to greater efficiency.

He told the conference, which is headed by Newton D. Baker, Wilson's Secretary of War, that his duty was "first of all, that destitution is relieved; and, secondly, that no individual and no family shall be entitled to public assistance of that individual or that family does not deserve it."

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—President Roosevelt Thursday night placed two boards in charge of the National Recovery Administration which Hugh S. Johnson once dominated single-handed.

A committee of six administration officials was selected to act under the direction of Donald R. Richberg in framing future policies of the government's relation to business.

A second committee, composed of two industrialists, two labor experts and a college professor, was named Mr. Roosevelt "to administer, under my direction," the industrial recovery law.

Two executive orders were issued. One created the National Industrial Recovery Board, the administrative agency of the law.

The other order revamped the existing Industrial Emergency Committee to include Secretary Ickes, Secretary Perkins, Chester Davis, AAA administrator; the chairman to be selected by the new National Industrial Recovery Board; Harry Hopkins, relief administrator, and Richberg.

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—President Roosevelt, asserting that the American people "have both feet on the ground," Thursday night shipped at "gossip mongers who invent tales."

Mr. Roosevelt spoke by radio to the fourth annual Women's Conference on Current Problems, sponsored by the New York Herald Tribune.

The text of the president's address follows:
"I wish that I could have attended in person all of the sessions of the conference on current problems because of the wide field of human endeavor which it has covered and because of the distinguished group of speakers to whom you have listened.

Hope-Camden Game Kickoff 8 p. m.

Hammons' Bobcats Touted to Break Ouachita Co. Jinx

Local Team Pepped Up
by Capital Hotel Rally
Thursday Night

WEIGHT TO CAMDEN

Panthers Have 14-Pound
Edge Over Bobcats,
Speed Is in Doubt

The kickoff at 8 o'clock Friday night on Hope High School athletic field will send the Bobcats away to clear their first hurdle in the championship race—the Camden Panthers.

Camden, 14 pounds heavier to the man, comes to Hope with a record of championship or near-championship teams the last half dozen years; and this generation of students can't remember when a Hope squad came over close to halting the march of the Panthers down the field.

This year may be a different story. Coach Foy Hammons has whipped better-than-average material into a hard-hitting outfit which can score with startling swiftness from mid-field, as evidenced by the 71-0 score in the opening game against Hamburg a week ago.

Camden's weight will not be a decisive factor if the Bobcats' mid-field plays elicit perfection. Despite their weight advantage Camden could do no better than a 6-0 victory over Nashville last week.

The Bobcats were given a fine send-off Thursday night with a banquet and pep meeting at New Capital hotel, staged by the Young Business Men's association.

Tickets for the Camden game are on sale at Moreland's drugstore, Webb's and Jack's newsstands, and Hope confectionery.

Immediately after the game the Young Business Men's association will hold a football dance at the Elks hall.

Many Camden Visitors
CAMDEN, Ark.—After a week of hard work Coach Sam Coleman said Thursday the Panthers were ready for their first foreign trip of the season Friday night. The Panthers play the strong and highly touted Bobcats of Hope in their new stadium. Indications point to a large crowd of Camden fans accompanying the team if the weather is ideal. The game will start at 8 p. m.

The locals went through their paces Thursday afternoon in their final workout that was the lightest of all. Several shifts have been tried out this week and Coleman has used various combinations in the line. He is seeking an aggressive forward wall that will be alert and break up the fast charging Bobcats and spill their defensive plays before they start. The line has been sluggish and drowsy in spots and Coleman is hoping his boys snap out of it Friday night. During mock scrimmage Wednesday afternoon the boys went through their paces with plenty of pep and looked better than any time this year. His line is the question mark for the Panthers, if the seven forwards play the kind of football they are capable of, Hope will be in for one tough night.

The local backs must also block better and charge on offense. The power is there but it wasn't utilized in the Nashville game to get the best results. They have been given plenty of offensive work this week. The Camden game requires accurate blocking and timing and this is necessary. In the closing minutes of the Nashville game the team seemed to have found itself and Panther supporters hope they can carry on at Hope Friday night.

Guernsey School

Textile Mills to Accept Mediation

Will Re-Employ Union Men Except Those Engaged in Violence

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Francis J. Gorman, strike director of the United Textile Workers, Friday accused George A. Sloan, head of the Cotton Textile Institute, of "sabotage" in a statement promising the co-operation of manufacturers with the newly created textile relations board.

Gorman referred to Sloan's statement that the code authority had recommended that as work became available workers who did not engage in lawless violence be re-employed.

Manufacturers' Statement
WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The cotton textile industry Thursday night pledged its co-operation to the government in the various steps required to carry out the terms of the peace plan which ended the recent strike.

Speaking through its Code Authority it made it clear that the manufacturers expect to be consulted before changes in the code are made. It was added, however, that the industry considers unnecessary appointment of a board to adjudicate labor disputes within its field.

With charges of discrimination against strikers already before the new board, the mill owners said they were in accord with President Roosevelt's request that all be re-employed except those who engaged in "lawless violence" during the walkout.

The new board went quickly to work and promised immediate action on the discrimination allegations. There were placed before it late in the day by Francis J. Gorman, first vice president of the United Textile Workers.

Ruccancers Defeat New Orleans in Second
Game 8 to 1

Galveston, Texas.—(AP)—A big second inning, in which they mixed three singles with two errors of commission and one of omission to score four runs, started the Galveston Ruccancers off Thursday night to an 8 to 1 victory over the New Orleans Pelicans.

The Pelicans tonight modeled them to pull open even terms with the Pelicans in the Dixie series, each team having one decision.

Jimmy Waldrop, who has a wicked curve, a nice change of pace and a potent cross fire despite his 36 years, was the game's hero. The southpaw veteran of four Dixie series had a shutout until the ninth when Carrington triple and Holman's single split it. This brace of hits was half of the Pelicans' total for the evening.

RIE, Pa.—(AP)—Police arrested two suspects, George Crooks, 42, and Mrs. Crooks, 29, here Friday in connection with the slaying of 11-year-old Lillian Gallaher at Detroit.

The couple were found in a house on the outskirts of the city after a negro appeared at headquarters and accused them of being the slayers.

Both refused to give information about themselves.

The Gallaher child's body was found in a trunk in a Detroit apartment Wednesday.

Both were later released after police had questioned them.

Martin Acquitted in Eaton Slaying

Trusty Guard Exonerated,
and Packed Courtroom
Applauds Verdict

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Prosecuting Attorney Carl E. Bailey announced Friday that charges of accessory to murder and permitting a prisoner to escape against V. O. Brockman would be dropped unless further evidence is revealed.

Brockman was indicted in connection with the slaying of Helen Spence Eaton, for which Frank Martin, trusty guard, was acquitted Thursday night.

Martin cleared
LITTLE ROCK.—A jury in Pulaski circuit court Thursday night found Frank Martin, trusty guard, not guilty of the murder of Helen Spence Eaton, whom he shot and killed when he overtook the fugitive girl convict on a lonely road in the northern part of the county last July.

The case went to the jury after three hours of arguments by four lawyers. A packed courtroom heard the arguments, and despite a warning by Judge McGehee, the crowd broke into loud cheers as the verdict was read.

Not even standing room could be found in the courtroom. A slight interruption occurred when two women, overcome by the excitement and heat, fainted. Dr. L. C. Aday, coroner, who was a witness in the trial, revived the women.

Judge McGehee had instructed the jury that it could return only one of two verdicts—guilty of first degree murder and acquittal. Lawrence C. Aiken, deputy prosecuting attorney in charge of the prosecution, asked only for conviction, leaving to the jury to select life imprisonment or death as the penalty.

Martin took the witness stand and in a voice choked with sobs declared his innocence of any intent to kill Helen Spence Eaton when he overtook the fugitive girl convict on a lonely road in the northern part of the county last July.

"I wouldn't have killed that girl," Martin declared passionately during cross-examination by Lawrence C. Aiken, deputy prosecuting attorney, "for anything in the world, if I hadn't had to. I wouldn't have killed her." His voice broke with emotion—"but if I'd meant serving every one of my 21 years."

Body of Child Found in Trunk

Victim of a mysterious slayer, the body of Lillian Gallaher, 11-year-old Detroit school girl, was found stuffed into a trunk in an apartment building near her home. Carload of Vetch Here on Tuesday

Special Price to Hemp-stead Farmers of 6½
Cents Per Pound

Hempstead county farmers who wish to produce vetch this fall for a soil improving crop should get vetch Tuesday, October 2, from a car at the rear of Monts Seed Store.

According to Frank Stanley, county agent, this vetch can be bought for 6 1/2 cents per pound and is a cheaper price than vetch can be bought elsewhere at this time. Farmers in Hempstead and Nevada counties are urged to take advantage of this low price.

Vetch when sown should be inoculated and this will be available at time seed are delivered. Anyone wanting vetch should get in touch with the county agent's office.

McAlester, Okla.—(AP)—Seven sick men, three of them considered invalids, escaped from the Oklahoma state prison here before dawn Thursday by tunneling under the north wall of the tubercular sanitarium, where they were patients.

All presumably fled in waiting automobiles. No trace of any of them had been found Thursday night.

Steals Spoon and Sharpens Piece to a Razor-Like Edge

Bronx Prison Discovers
He Has Made an Improved Weapon

PLAN SANITY PLEA

Meanwhile, Prisoner May Be Surrendered to New Jersey Officers

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Sheriff John J. Hanley disclosed Friday that Bruno Richard Hauptmann had stolen a spoon in jail, broken it into four pieces, sharpened one, and then hidden them about the cell.

Hanley said the bowl part of the spoon had been sharpened to a razor-edge against the frame of an iron cot.

Three parts of the spoon were found in a toilet bowl, and the fourth in a wash-basin.

It was said to be too small to be used as a key, but might have been used as a weapon.

Meanwhile Hauptmann's attorneys announced plans for giving him a sanity test.

A man was taken in the Yorkville district where some Lindbergh money was passed, but Department of Justice agents were careful to say he was not actually under arrest.

New Jersey May Get Him
NEW YORK.—(AP)—Attorney General David T. Wilentz, of New Jersey, came here Friday to confer with District Attorney Samuel J. Foley on the Lindbergh kidnap case.

Foley announced that New Jersey had made no effort to extradite Bruno Richard Hauptmann, but said if the New Jersey authorities asked for his removal "we will be only too willing to co-operate."

We will surrender the prisoner even in advance of his trial here," Foley said.

He disclosed that he had been placed in entire charge of the local investigation.

Copyright, Associated Press
NEW YORK.—From Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's memory of the ransom rendezvous and the recollections of a feminine swimming companion of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, authorities strove Thursday night to trace accomplices they believe Hauptmann had in the stealing and slaying of the aviator's baby boy.

Increasing signs of a police conviction that several persons participated in the kidnapping were manifest as Colonel Lindbergh, his identity disguised, personally confronted Hauptmann in the office of the Bronx district attorney.

J. Edgar Hoover of the Department of Justice has indicated progress toward further arrests. Other authorities declined to discuss this phase of the inquiry.

New Clue Discounted
For a short time a new clue appeared in a report by Mrs. Katherine Maurer of the Bronx that her husband, John Maurer, had disappeared and that he had been acquainted with Hauptmann. This was discounted somewhat when Mrs. Maurer returned to her home from the prosecutor's office, saying it was "purely a domestic matter" and that neither she nor her husband knew Hauptmann.

Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, superintendent of New Jersey state police, remarked that Harry Uhlig and Endore Fisch, both friends of Hauptmann, had been customers at a store where the Maurers worked.

Purported 'Secrets'
The name "John" has bobbed up again and again in the two-year-old quest for the baby's kidnappers, for that was the name by which Dr. John F. Condon, the intermediary, knew the ransom taker. "Schwarzkopf," said authorities, "had followed out everything" Dr. Condon had told them and "so far as we know he has given us everything he knows."

"No one will ever know whether Dr. Condon withheld anything or not," the police chief said in commenting on a published story that some phases of the ransom dealing still were a secret.

Schwarzkopf plans further study of the kidnap ladder with Arthur Kochler, a Wisconsin expert, in comparison with tools and lumber from Hauptmann's garage.

Woman Associate
An attractive vacation associate of Hauptmann's in 1932, Anita Lutzenborg, was questioned for several hours about the summer swimming party which numbered several others. This was while Mrs. Hauptmann was abroad.

A friend of the girl, John Deane, appeared briefly at the prosecutor's office and then went home. He said he knew Hauptmann "fairly well," having met him in July, 1932.

Hauptmann was walking with a limp at that time, Bruno said, but explained he had "varicose veins" when friends asked whether he had been injured.

"Hauptmann never did have a y

Your Health

Muscle Tear Common in Fall Athletics

One of the commonest injuries in daily life, and even more so in such games as football, basketball and soccer, is a bruise or muscle tear. Such injury occurs anywhere on the body, but is most commonly seen on the thighs, which are likely to be injured in blocking.

When a severe bump of the muscles of the thigh takes place, there may be tearing of the muscle, with a large amount of hemorrhage into the tissues. The first thing to do under such circumstances is to put some pressure to control the bleeding and to apply cold.

After the skin is shaved, an elastic bandage may be applied, or an adhesive bandage, as a circular dressing. This will continue the pressure and also help to sustain weight.

A firm bandage gives support and may be left in place for several weeks. If it is sufficiently waterproof to withstand bathing. After the first effects of the injury have subsided, heat may be applied to aid absorption of the blood and to promote healing.

Another type of injury that is very common is the pulling and-tearing of ligaments around the joints.

The most important step in treatment of such injuries is complete rest, secured by immobilizing the joint—sometimes by use of a plaster cast, sometimes by strapping with adhesive tape.

Of course, joints that are set in one position should never be fixed without the attention of someone who understands the matter thoroughly. In other words, only a physician, who realizes the advantages to be secured and the dangers that can result from the wrong kind of fixing or strapping in the wrong position, should attempt to put on a permanent bandage.

The knee joint is the one most likely to be injured in football. The most cases of the blow on the knee take place on the outer side. In this position, the lower leg acts as a lever, which serves to tear the cartilages around the knee joint.

In injuries of the knee joint, also, fixation of the joint in the correct position is of greatest importance.

Sprains of the ankle joint are also exceedingly common. It is not advisable to wait until all swelling goes down before applying a firm bandage or dressing. It is usually believed best to apply a tight strapping before the swelling comes up.

A sprain of the ankle may be bandaged with the foot in the proper position, using adhesive straps. This type of strapping should never be done except by one who understands thoroughly the mechanics of the joint and the nature of the injury to the tissues.

Tells Why '61 Was Our Great Tragedy

—Historian Surveys Conflict of Rival Societies

By BRUCE CATTON

The Civil War was the greatest tragedy in American life, says historian James Truslow Adams. Quite properly, then, he gives his new book which analyzes that conflict the title, "America's Tragedy."

The essence of the tragedy, he says, was this: that in the south men developed a society which placed its emphasis on human values and not on mere getting and spending—but that force of circumstances tide this society to an institution, slavery, which inevitably had to be overthrown.

Everything worked out wrong. If cotton gin and power loom had not been invented just when they were, slavery would probably have fallen of its own weight, long before it became an "issue." If northern abolitionists and southern fire-eaters had not spent 20 years inflaming passions, a peaceful settlement could have taken place.

If the rise of the cotton empire had not exactly paralleled the rise of northern industrialism, the clash between the two societies would not have been so direct and bitter.

But nobody got a break. Force of circumstances compelled the south to support itself more and more firmly to slavery just at the time when world opinion was condemning slavery.

It was America's supreme tragedy, that the one section of the land which took a broad, humanitarian view of life, had to be the one which led

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Children Quickly Detect Favoritism

"What shall I do," asks the mother of three children "when their daddy shows marked preference for our youngest boy who is eight? His sister, two years older, seldom gets any attention at all. And our oldest boy of fifteen is treated as though he were not in the family at all."

"Don't criticize everything he does, but really he is a fine quiet boy, with a good mind, although he does break loose at times as most boys will. But his father treats him dreadfully. He no matter how bad little Freddie is, my husband thinks it smart. He says openly that Freddie is 'his boy' and usually adds that he's worth both of the others put together."

Well—what can I say? You can't talk to a man like that. If he isn't more sense himself it is too late to put it there.

Many Others Are Like Him. He has plenty of company, too, that's the worst of it. Fathers not all are so brutal as to shout it from the houseposts, the fact that they don't care for any child but one, but they make it so evident in a thousand ways that a blind man could see it. And children are neither blind nor stupid; they are unaccountably quick to sense their position.

Sometimes I think that men adopt a pose toward their children. For instance, this father made up his mind when his first son was born that here was another male who would some day grow up to be as big as himself. From the start he probably decided to use the high hand and let that boy know who was boss. In time there was trouble, but rather than change his tune and acknowledge he had made a mistake, he redoubled his energy as he was the way with mistaken people when they know they are wrong.

He never understood the girl very likely. And observing his way of treating her brother, she became moody and frightened. He may have felt the child's distaste. This is why, perhaps, he pays no attention to her now.

New Trying to Change. Too, his exploited preference for the baby has been in the way of a gesture to recompense and avoid the attitude he had toward the others. All the pent-up affection and demonstrations withheld before, have found outlet in his youngest son. And, as usual, the boy will take advantage and lead him a nice dance later on unless a miracle happens.

All this is purely imaginary. There may be a dozen reasons for this father's behavior toward his children. But whatever they are, one thing is certain. He himself is responsible for the lop-sided relationship.

It is true that parents do have preferences occasionally, but where such occur, they should be guarded from even a hint of suspicion on the part of the children. Every child should feel that he comes in for an equal share of affection.

Mothers, if they have a favorite, are more careful about hurting the rest. Dads are usually less particular.

BEACH CLUB GIRL

BEGIN HERE TODAY

BOOTS RAEBURN, 18, elopes with RUSS LUND, swimming instructor. When he goes to Florida, promising to send for her later, she goes to work in a department store.

Russ does not write. Months pass and then comes word that he has been killed in a motorboat accident.

Boots meets DENIS EWEYAY, young author, and EDWARD VAN SCIVER, wealthy and socially prominent. She is in love with Denis and jealous of beautiful KAY CHILLINGFORD.

Boots gets a job in a book store and goes home to live in order to help her parents financially. Edward repeatedly urges her to marry him and finally she agrees. On Christmas Day they have a walk in the fog. Edward is badly hurt saving her from a reckless driver.

Mrs. Raeburn receives news that she has a winning ticket in a lottery.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLIV

IF Verily won, said Miss Florida, awed, the lottery ticket would be worth something "in the neighborhood" of $150,000.

"Not that I think there's a slight chance, even, of his winning," Mrs. Raeburn put in with a smile. She had a wire from some totally unknown people at Bay Shore, Long Island, who wanted to buy a half share in her interest for $1500. It all seemed faintly preposterous. The ticket, just as it stood, had already netted them $3500.

The old shingled house was electric with expectation these days. Old friends dropped in to congratulate the Raeburns. Boots' mother fairly glowed. She had lost years, it seemed, with the stroke of luck which had befallen them.

Denis came over to congratulate them and he and Boots had a few unsatisfactory moments together alone in the living room while the girl's mother was called to the telephone.

"What are their plans?" She smiled, shrugging. "They're trying to rent the house. Mother says she will have a fine on the $3500 no matter what comes. She wants to go to California. We've had people streaming through all week, telling us what's wrong with the house. It's a very humbling experience."

He was staring at her oddly, intently. "What on earth's the matter?" "Sorry, I didn't mean to be rude. Do you know you've grown up to be a very grand young woman these days?"

She flushed. "Must you always poke fun at me?" "But I'm not. I'm deadly serious." His dark brows were drawn together. He was so close to her that she could see the nervous pulse beating in his lean brown throat. She longed to say, "Why can't we really be friends? Why must there always be this armed truce between us?" But she was silent.

"Book going well?" He threw up his hand in a characteristic, impatient gesture. "Rotten. Haven't had an idea for weeks. I'm going to seed."

"Why do you stay on here then?" she questioned boldly.

He looked at her for a moment, then he smiled. "I'll say I didn't have time to buy a hat, though. On every important occasion in a woman's life she requires a new hat."

"This one is all right." There was something warm and intimate in the gaze he bent upon her. "This old thing?" She touched the brim of the brown straw disparagingly.

In Autumn
Who, walking in the spring, shall see,
Now green upon the poplar tree,
And smiles with hope as he goes by—
Is servant of his destiny.
Who, walking in the summer fields,
Sees all the gold of harvest-yields,
And labors here unceasingly—
Is master of his destiny.

Sister MARY'S KITCHEN

Doing new Things With Vegetables—Garden Dishes Need Not Be Dull

By MARY E. DAGUE
NEA Service Staff Writer

Why, is it, I wonder, that vegetable dishes, except for a few romantic exceptions, always sound and often taste so deadly dull? Perhaps it is because of the casual and uninspired cooking they too frequently get, so that in the end they are unmistakably in the uninteresting category of things that are "good for you."

Yet when I go to market these crisp autumn days and see the colorful line-up—rich red tomatoes, creamy

Breakfast: Grapes, cereal, cream, broiled pan fish, spider, corn bread, milk, coffee.

Luncheon: Tomato and macaroni Neapolitan, graham rolls, salad of Chinese cabbage and red and green sweet peppers, peach cottage pudding, milk tea.

Dinner: Sauerkraut juice cocktail, baked corn, oysters in celery sauce, jellied fruit salad with cheese cups, plum duff, milk, coffee.

cauliflower, jade cabbage, orange carrots and emerald broccoli—I feel that I ought to be able not only to write, but to cook, vegetable poems.

Of course, if you are bent on sticking to one way of doing each vegetable, if for instance, tomatoes stewed represent the ultimate in imagination to you, then obviously there are no cooking poems in your soul.

Speaking of tomatoes, here is a grand array of things that can be done to them. Stuff them, bake them, use them in chowders, scallion them with bread crumbs, combine them with meat, macaroni or rice. Try, for instance, tomato and macaroni Neapolitan as a luncheon dish. Or use spaghetti if you prefer. But don't break the sticks. Put the ends in the boiling water and as they become soft they will curl up and the whole lengths can be put under water.

Tomato and Macaroni Neapolitan
Two cups cooked macaroni, 1 cup milk, 1 tablespoon flour, 2 tablespoons butter, 1/2 cup grated cheese, 2 or 3 large tomatoes, dried bread crumbs or crisp ready-to-serve cereal, salt, pepper.

Melt butter, stir in flour and slowly add milk, stirring constantly. Bring to the boiling point and stir in cheese. Remove from heat and add macaroni. Mix thoroughly and spread in a shallow baking dish. Peel tomatoes and cut in halves. Lay these over the top, cut side up, pressing into the macaroni mixture. Sprinkle tomatoes with salt and pepper and dredge with bread crumbs or the crisp cereal. Dot with bits of butter, sprinkle with moderate amount of cheese and bake in a moderate oven until the tomatoes are soft but not broken and the cheese is melted and a rich brown. Serve from baking dish.

Oysters in Celery Sauce.
Two cups diced celery, 1 cup white sauce, 8 large oysters, 1 thin slice bacon, few drops onion juice, juice half lemon.

Add onion juice to lemon juice and dip each oyster in it. Wrap each oyster in slice of bacon, fastening the bacon with small skewers or wooden toothpicks. Put in a COLD iron frying pan and cook slowly until bacon is crisp, turning often and pouring off the fat as it cooks out. Place in a border around celery in cream sauce on a large deep platter.

To prepare celery, cook celery in boiling salt water until tender, letting the water cook away as much as possible. Drain and combine with white sauce.

declining—for which we must be very thankful. More and more men and women are looking up their own facts and forming their own opinions.

"We are learning to discriminate between news and rumor. As a people we put our tongues in our cheeks when a fact or a series of facts are distorted, no matter what motive is the cause of that distortion."

Deplores Tax Confusion
HOT SPRINGS, Ark.—When the states and the federal government can agree as to their respective fields of taxation, so that both will not be taxing the same thing, the burden of taxation will be simplified for the people who pay the taxes and the agencies that collect. Governor Futrell told delegates attending the eighth annual conference of States Tobacco Tax association, which opened a two-day session here Thursday.

"The federal government and the states should not tax the same thing," Governor Futrell said, "and the fields of taxation should be separate. Until this is done there is certain to be dissatisfaction and confusion."

dough," Braue said of the suspect's spending habits, asserting that Hauptmann described himself as a carpenter who worked "here and there."

When a morning of examination had ended at the Bronx district attorney's office, the importance of Miss Lutzenberg's questioning and that of other Hauptmann acquaintances was minimized by attaches but it was regarded significant that Miss Lutzenberg returned after lunch.

Mysterious 'John'
"We always called him 'Dick,'" Miss Lutzenberg had said of Hauptmann as detectives studied pictures of her and the prisoner in a family album. "Everybody knew him that summer at Hunter's island. All the girls liked him."

But in the party, she said, was a "mysterious John"—a man who seemed to have something on his mind.

"He almost never said anything," the girl commented on "John."

John, she said, was "Dick's closest friend and Dick was the only friend John had."

The gay vacation group on the island in Long Island sound was pictured in a variety of photographic views. The girl, of above average size, was wearing a two-tone swimming suit in one picture. Hauptmann, in trunks only, was nearby.
